INTRODUCTION

In this volume of the Ngagyer Nyingmay Sutra, Mr. Soem Togyay Kazi has reproduced an exceedingly rare treatise on Buddhist logic, a commentary on Sa-kyas paṇḍita's Pāṇi na rgye gter by Glo-bo mīthānchen Bod-nam-lhaṅ-grub. This manuscript was obtained from the Ven. Chopgye Trichen (Red-topped Khat-don) and is probably now unique. Because of the importance of this commentary for Sakyapa scholars, Chopgye Rinspoche was most anxious that the text should appear as quickly as possible. Mr. Kazi has kindly agreed, in the interests of making the reproduction more widely available abroad, to issue the text in his series.

Although this work is clearly a product of the glorious Sakya tradition, Glu-ko mkhan-chen exemplifies the eclecticism that flourished in the Nepalese borderlands during the 15th and 16th centuries.⁴ Following the Tshad ma rpa gye commentary one finds (pp. 423-426) a brief work devoted to the famed Karavastu poet-saint Mila-ra-ma.⁵

Ole-bo rikkhan-chen was one of a group of eminent Buddhist scholars connected with the former principality of Ole Ssang-thang (Mugang) in Nepal.

It would appear that ripe ps is the preferred form; consequently, we have used the title Final on the title page throughout the introduction to refer to Final as the most common.

2 David Scottriggs has recently published an informed account of the religious life and fervour of English sailors during this period: Four Lives of Seamen (2 vols., Oxford, 1997). It is important to see what was operating in Odoardo within the broader picture of the United Prots: were they predominant in the early 1600s and what other considerations were there.

a list that includes such names as Glo-bo lo-tul-lu, Shu-sab-la-chen', Mngs'-ri pun-chen Padma-dhang-gyal, and Ngag-'dzin Legs-bstan-she-rje. Under the first few generations of the successors of A-ra-m-dpal, Buddhism flourished in Mustang. Glo-bo gained a reputation as a centre of artistic and literary creative energy. Why Mustang declined is a complicated problem. Undoubtedly, two of the important factors were the bitter and constant warfare that plagued the western Bhutia states for almost two centuries and the rise of the Gorkha state. The unsettled conditions led to a redirection of trade to the eastern passes. As the Valley and, later, Sola grew prosperous, Mustang and its western neighbours fell upon hard days.

Glo-ko mihan-chen belongs to the late 15th century¹ when the princes of Mustang had reached the apogee of their power. Unfortunately, we know very little of the events of his life. His chief guru included Rgyal-tshab Dru-pa Kun-dga'-dhang-phug², Gu-ge pan-chen Gang-po-nyal-otshar³, Yonge-'dzin Dān-mchog-'phel⁴, and perhaps also Go-nar-pa Rind-nar-nu-sangs⁵. Since he is also the author of biographical works about Bla-

Debar¹ and Grub-tsho Yon-tan-dpal, one would assume that Gho-bo mtham-chen had also studied with these masters. All of these gurus belong to the Sakya-NGarpa tradition. Yet the fact that Gho-bo mtham-chen presided at the final monastic ordination in 1511 of the Nyingma reformer, Ming-rin-pun-chen², would seem to indicate that the relation between the Nyingma and Sakya were then, as they are now, especially cordial in these border areas. There are, therefore, convincing arguments for including this work in the Nagawa Nyingma Kanak.

Glo-bu mltan-chen's group¹ was contained four volumes² and was apparently never xylographed. He was an author with broad interests and considerable versatility. Of special interest would be his history of the Shar-pa lineage³, two notes on the Sidon paan rat dōge, an orthodox treatment of the parigatagarbha theory, and his study on the examination and appraisal of jewels. The text reproduced here is a fresh and often thought provoking commentary on the Tsāid sui rig gte, the first and most successful indigenous Tibetan study on the principles of Mādhyamika dialectic. This commentary was written⁴ at Thub-bstan Bar-ryas-ging in 1482, just three hundred years after the birth of the famed Saṅkya pan-chen of whom he was acclaimed to be the rebirth. In these three centuries many developments in the Tibetan scholastic tradition had taken place.

The question is especially relevant for understanding where the work reported here stands with reference to Givens's (2004) earlier work on the same topic.

MIDWEST LOGIC IN TIME

The Tsahed msa rigs gter has been one of the few indigenous shastras to be accorded the esteem reserved for the renowned Buddhist treatises of India, translated into Tibetan and preserved in the Tanjur. In a superbly concise and economic manner Śa-kyas paṇḍita has summarized the basic topics treated by Candrakīrti in his seven monumental works of exposition on Madhyamañiśa dialectic.¹ Thanks to the work of Stcherbatsky, Vidyaśekhara Bhattacharyya, Mirman, Frazer Walker, Tucci, and a host of other dedicated scholars, what is now known of the sources of Buddhist logic is considerable. The approach of all these scholars, almost without exception, has been to utilize the Tibetan translations and secondary sources only in so far as they are able to illuminate Sanskrit originals, extant or reconstructed. Except for Stcherbatsky, no one has tried to comprehend the various developments in logic and educational methodology in the Lamasist lands. No one has attempted to investigate how Tibetan scholars understood and classified the enormous corpus of logic gathered together in the Tanjur. While it would certainly invite just ridicule to venture a coherent account of Buddhist logic in Tibet, a bare outline of certain of the more important aspects can contribute something towards understanding the significance of the Tsahed msa rigs gter and the text reproduced in this volume for the Tibetan tradition.

The first works on Buddhist logic had already been translated by Shu-ho Dpal-rtsegs, Drangpa Nam-ukha', and others during the Sogyo-er or "Period of the Earlier Propagation of the Utharna" (7th-8th cent.). The most important of these were Candrakīrti's *Saundaryaparīṣadabharṇa*¹, *Hotakīśa*², and *Saundaryaparīṣadabharṇa*³.
